MENDOCINO VALLEY SCENES — COUNTY BUILDINGS — MENDOCINO LOGGING AND COAST SCENES

VOL. XXX. UKIAH, MENDOCINO CO., CAL.: FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1905 NO. 13

PREPARATIONS FOR THE RACES

The coming week is being looked forward to as the greatest week of racing ever held in this county. About $1300 was raised among the business men and this amount was considered so liberal that the promoters of the meet concluded they could pay all the purses and would be justified in devoting a portion of it to importing some high class horses here to compete for the advertised purses. The result is that twenty-five as good runners as can be found in the state are now at the track and about fourteen more will arrive today from Petaluma and Emeryville. There will also be a carload of trotters from Petaluma.

All told there will be about fifty-five horses at the track—forty-five runners and ten pacers and trotters. The good purses and the light entrance fees have much to do with this showing. The Ukiah track has the reputation of being the fastest half mile track in the state and good time is sure to be made. It is receiving daily sprinkling and there is now a crew of men at work putting the finishing touches on to be in readiness for next Tuesday. The following is a list of the horses that arrived yesterday: Mr. Dingle, Kickumbob, Bill Nye, Mischievous, Roadwarmer, Jack Richilieu, Carilee, Badly Used, Lone Fisherman, Cora Goetz, Leah, Harry Beck and Black Cloud. Yellowstone, Jack Little, Procrastinate, Firmfoot, George P. McNear, Edinborough, The Lieutenant, and four others are due to arrive today.

They Resisted an Officer.

Game Warden Ralph returned Wednesday from Santa Rosa where he had been to attend the trial of William Nolan. It will be remembered that some weeks ago Ralph caught Nolan and several other hunters with quail in their possession. The hunters were on their way to this city and promised the warden that they would stop here and plead guilty. Instead of doing so they sneaked through town and tried to make their escape. Ralph took the train and followed them to Geyserville where they were taking the train. A scrap ensued and Ralph had Nolan and another gentleman arrested for resisting an officer. Nolan was fined $100 by Judge Burnett; the other fellow parted with $125 for his part in the episode. They were residents of San Francisco.

Telephone Improvements

It is reported that the Sunset Telephone company is to improve its telephone system on the coast by adding another wire leading to San Francisco. The new line will be 300-pound copper circuit between Santa Rosa and Gualala, one 172-pound copper circuit between Gualala and Greenwood, one 300-pound circuit between Greenwood and Mendocino, one 172-pound circuit between Mendocino and Fort Bragg, and one 172-pound circuit between Usal and Scotia.

Violently Insane.

An insane man by the name of Carpenter was brought over from Lakeport Saturday by Sheriff Moore. The gentleman was particularly violent and S. F. Sylar, J. T. Manning and E. A. Ayer accompanied the sheriff as deputies. Carpenter was first noticed acting queer a couple of weeks ago but it was thought that the trouble was only temporary and he was taken home. His delusions returned and he was so violent that he had to be committed to the asylum.

Lively Runaway

While Dave Paxton was getting Edwards Bros. meat wagon ready for his regular trip to Eel river yesterday morning the horses got scared and started out on a run. They went down the asylum road until they reached the river before they were stopped. The wagon was considerably damaged.

CEMENT WORKER DIES SUDDENLY

E. G. Sobey of San Francisco, one of the cement workers on the state hospital dam, died Tuesday night of heart failure. Sobey had arrived the day before and appeared in good health. He had retired early and his room mate was sitting up writing a letter when he heard Sobey moaning. He found that he was in a bad condition and sent to the state hospital for assistance. Before the physician arrived he was dead. The deceased was about fifty-five years old and was a member of the cement workers union.

Are Pleased With Ukiah.

M. L. Johnson, Mrs. E. M. Johnson and Miss A. M. Johnson came up from San Francisco Saturday and the ladies will spend a couple of weeks in this city. Lhey are guests at the Palace. Mr. Johnson is in the managing editor's department of the San Francisco Call and returned to the city the first of the week to resume his duties. They had visited this city some time since on an excursion and were so well pleased with it that they decided to spend their vacation here this year and will probably be constant summer visitors.

Thirty Days in Jail.

George McCaully, a sixteen year old youth, was rounded up by Constable Lynch this week for appropriating a watch and some other valuables at John Days. He was brought to this city yesterday and was allowed to plead guilty to a charge of petit larceny. Judge Crockett gave him a lecture and thirty days in jail to have time to repent. McCaully came to this county from San Francisco and had been working at Frasiers mill.

FORT BRAGGER IS STABBED

E. Y. Montgomery of Fort Bragg went for a ride last Sunday with Mrs. Sam Finney, says the Advocate and is now occupying a cot in the hospital as the result of an encounter with that lady's husband who was waiting for him when he went to put the rig up. Montgomery was stabbed several times with a pocket knife but none of the wounds were considered serious. Finney was held under $500 bail pending his preliminary examination.

Returns After Twenty Years.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Kent and family arrived this week from Montana. Mr. Kent is a son of Mrs. Norris of this city and a brother of C. H. Kent and William Norris. He left Ukiah twenty years ago having been employed as a clerk in J. P. Hoffman's store for several years. From San Francisco he went to Kansas city during the railroad war, getting transportation for $1. During the twenty years he has made two visits to his old home. He is pleased to get back, as all former Ukiahites are, and will no doubt locate here.

The Sunday School Convention.

The Mendocino county Sunday school workers held a successful convention at Fort Bragg last week. The newly elected officers are: Attorney J. L. McNab, president; D. M. Gibson, vice president; Mrs. Alice McCorquedale, secretary; B. Pemberton, treasurer; Mrs. Minnie Charlton, secretary of the Home department; Mrs. V. Eversole, secretary of the Cradle roll. The next convention will be held at Willits.

Rooms Will be Scarce.

Rooms promise to be in demand during race week. The hotels are sure to be filled to overflowing and a large number of guests will have to be lodged in private houses. Parties having spare rooms that can be rented should put up signs to that effect or leave word with the hotels in order that all may be accommodated.

NOTES ABOUT THE HOP CROP

The hop crop in this valley is all baled and it is believed to be considerably short. As yet no large sales have been made. L. M. Ruddock, who had his crop contracted at fourteen cents, has shipped and the entire lot was accepted. John and Wiley Higgins of Largo had their crop contracted at eleven cents and disposed of the few bales over the contract at the same price.

Reports as to the prospects for prices are somewhat conflicting but are not particularly flattering. Several of the old hopmen state, however, that they have found that prices usually advance until December and that they intend holding a while as they see no prospect for a decline. They are very hopeful that they will receive a much better price than has yet been paid.

Visit the Coast.

H. L. Broadribb of Chicago, accompanied by Hugh Bradley and E. J. T. Woodward drove over to the coast last week. They visited Point Arena and Greenwood and report a very good time barring the dust. Mr. Broadribb is a wealthy gentleman and was looking over the ground with the intention of purchasing some realestate in this county. He was very favorably impressed with the county and its future prospects.

Mead Reports Forest Fire.

Albert Mead was over to Greenwood last week attending to business interests. He reports that there was a good sized forest fire back of Valenti and that he was delayed two days on the road home. When he came through part of the road had slid in and the remainder was blocked with fallen trees. He states that this fire will stop the bark hauling for this season.

Another Bank Opened.

The Commercial Bank of Mendocino opened its doors for business Monday, according to the Beacon. F. W. Stickney is cashier of the institution. The directors are: Joshua Grindle, president; J. S. Ross, vice president; F. H. Perkins, W. B. Coombsy and C. J. Wood.

Accident Delays Train.

The steam chest on the engine that was drawing the passenger Saturday evening blew out and the train was stranded a short distance below the race track. The busses went down and brought the passengers in but it was some little time before the mail arrived.

Figuring on Flats.

Dr. E. G. Case reports that he is figuring on erecting two flats on his lot on Standley street. They will occupy the present location of J. H. Barkers warehouse.

A Union for Covelo.

Covelo now has a teamsters union. The charter arrived and the organization was instituted last Saturday evening. A good membership is reported.

COX GETS THE TOP FIGURE.

T. W. Cox had his joke in great style this week on his fellow hopmen and on the citizens of the community generally. He startled everyone by the announcement that he had sold a part of his hops for twenty cents a pound and stood ready to back his assertion. The "nos" and "you don't says" were thick in the air until he explained that it was only a small part of the crop, ten pounds in fact, that he had sold to Will Cox for one of the bakeries. Frank Albertson was one of the first to get caught on the joke and, although, as he said, Cox had always been a reliable man, he thought he had gone astray until he found out the quantity that he had disposed of.

TRIAL JURORS FOR OCTOBER

The following list of trial jurors were drawn in the superior court Monday morning to appear in court October 10, for the trial of civil and criminal cases:

Vivian McNab's Party

Tuesday afternoon the home of Attorney and Mrs. J. L. McNab was the scene of a very pretty party, the occasion being the fourth birthday of little Vivian McNab. About thirty of her little playmates were invited to help her celebrate the happy event and from two until five the little ones thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The dining room was very prettily decorated with colored ribbons and flowers, and tables loaded with ice cream, cakes and sweets dear to the hearts of children. Miss Vivian was the recipient of presents galore and it is safe to say that the event will be treasured as one of the pleasantest moments in their lives even after the children have grown to be men and women.

Eagle Doings

The Eagles had a big time last night and grafted wings on a number of new members. This is the first initiatory boom of the season and there are a large number of other applications in that will come up for initiation in the near future. After lodge a banquet was served and the young eaglets fed for the first time. The lodge is one of the strongest in this city in membership and is steadily increasing.

Merited Tribute

Supervisor Len Barnard intends to have a fine bridge built across Mitchell creek, as he has the money credited to his district to do it, which is a very good showing. As near as we can understand Len has to get in and fight for his rights with the other members of the board at times, but he is generally equal to all such little emergencies.—Advocate.

To Build a Residence.

Architect Jasper is getting ready to commence the erection of a fine residence for Cashier A. L. Tracy of the Savings bank on his lot on Smith and Dora streets. The design is a very neat one and the house will be an ornament to the block.

PROGRESS ON ASYLUM DAM

The addition to the dam at the state hospital is progressing rapidly. Steward Handy reports that he has about twenty men at work on the improvement and that the foundation for one side of the addition has been laid. The rock for the work is being quarried from a neighboring hillside. The rocks are being set in cement and when hardened the masonry will be as solid as if it was one large rock. The work will be completed in time to stand the rains and 10,000,000 gallons of water will be stored for next summer's use.

Crawford brothers report that they threshe 62,991 bushels of grain this year.

GARDENER COMMITS SUICIDE

Thomas Seicker, a gardener employed by Henshaw Bros. on their Eden valley ranch, was discovered last week about a mile from the house in the brush with his throat cut. He had been missing for several days and the searchers were attracted to the body by the buzzards. They had been unable to reach the corpse on account of the thick brush. The deceased had been despondent for some time and it is thought that ill health prompted the rash act.

Rawles Disappointed.

R. H. Rawles was over from Boonville last week on a short visit. He says that he is quite disappointed over the tax rate as he understood that when he was downed in the supervisorial election that he would at least have a merely nominal rate to pay this fall. He now finds that the economical Democrats require as much money as the Republicans when it comes to running the countys business. Bob states that the Democrats will find out some day that the time to commence setting the tax rate is at the first meeting of the board after election and not in September.

About Little Fshes.

Rose Bros. were down from their range near Sherwood last week and visited the local fish hatchery and secured an allotment of 40,000 young trout which they took home with them to stock Cherry creek on their range. Col. LaMotte reports that the remainder of the fish in the hatchery are doing nicely and are attracting considerable attention from visitors. One of the small fry is an albino and is a particular favorite with sightseers.

MAN KILLED IN ALPINE WOODS

Chas Ashton, a sawyer in the Alpine woods, was instantly killed last week by being jammed between two logs, says the Advocate. He had cut one log nearly through and was leaning against the other when the log he was sawing started to roll. The donkey engine was required to pull the logs apart and the body was mashed into a pulp. The deceased leaves three grown up children, one of whom resides in Washington and the others in Santa Maria. The deceased was about forty-six years old.

Will Move Over.

C. W. Sanders and family were over from Boonville Friday. They have rented the old Eaton place and will move over this winter. Mr. Sanders has rented his place in Anderson valley and will probably become a permanent resident.

Infringed a County Ordinance.

Game Warden Ralph arrested H. C. Fisher for shooting on the county road near Willits last week. The gentleman was taken to Willits and plead guilty before Judge Kenworthy and was fined $5.

A Champion Scrapper.

Frank Neal, champion feather weight of the world, was registered at the Cecille this week. He was on his way to San Francisco after an outing at John Flanagans ranch near Bluelakes.

Business College Opens.

The Ukiah Business College opened on the 18th with a good class. President Mathews reports that he will have a number of new scholars in next week. He expects to have a class of about fifty this year.

Shipping Hogs.

Dan and Wiley English of Covelo passed through town Tuesday on their way to San Francisco with two carloads of hogs. They report having sold them for a good price to a city buyer.

MONTIE RETIRES FROM THE TURF

Not having the time to drive and take care of his horses Montie Banker has concluded to retire from the horse business and someone will get a chance to buy some good drivers very reasonable. Anyone who knows Montie knows that he would not have anything but good drivers, as he has owned such horses as Black Bart, 2:10. Bred and raised Shley B. that won the 2 year old futurity here last fall and has since made a half in 1:04½ with but very little work and is considered one of the best prospects in the state.

Rose Thorn, the sensational pacer, that made the sweat roll down the face of more than one of the horsemen of Ukiah 2 years ago. Flit Madison, by James Madison, a registered and speedy little mare that could trot a 2:35 clip any time. The beautiful little mare, Dollie Morris, by a son of Anteo, that could trot a 2:40 clip. Ora W., a beautiful black stallion, by Ora Wilke, and a number of other good ones. Whisper, the sorrel mare advertised for sale in this issue, has been a half in 1:08 and a mile in 2:23 with but very little work.

Mr. Bankers determination to retire from the turf will be greatly regretted by the lovers of horse flesh in this city as he has been one of the most prominent gentlemen connected with the breeding and raising of standard bred horses in this county. He thoroughly understands the business and is a rare judge of horse flesh. It is to be hoped that his present stables will be bought by local people and thus kept in the county.

Attempted Burglaries.

A number of attempted burglaries have been reported recently. Twice during the past month attempts have been made on the residence of B. S. Hirsch. Tuesday night his Chinese cook noticed someone prowling around the residence of Attorney Maurice Hirsch and gave the alarm. Mr. Hirsch and the cook each armed with revolvers started to investigate the matter and the cook came upon the burgular just as he was trying the back door of the residence. The marauder commenced to run and two shots were sent in his direction. He succeeded in getting over the fence and out of the way, however.

Bringing His Wool Over.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Burger came over from Boonville this week. Mrs. Burger is steadily improving from her recent operation but still has to be under medical treatment and will remain in this city for a time. Mr. Burger is hauling his wool over and will store it in this city until it is sold. He has 8500 pounds and states that he considers the prospects good for fair price. No figures have yet been quoted on the fall clip for this county and will not before October 10th it is said.

Rebekahs Enjoy Themselves.

At the meeting of the Cornelia Rebekah lodge last Monday night a very enjoyable time was had. After the initiatory ceremonies a very amusing program was rendered followed by a delicate collation. Nearly a hundred were in attendance.

The Albion Specialists

Harry G. Wright of Albion was in town last Friday on his way to Boonville. Mr. Wright is now connected with Dr. Pollard of Albion, the firm name being Pollard & Wright specialists. Mr. Wright is the trained assistant. The gentlemen are reported to be doing a good business. Mr. Wright has a highly recommended complexion powder which he is placing on the market.

Sacred Song Service.

There will be a sacred Song service at the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening, October 1, given by the choir.

"It seemeth he hath great influence both at home and abroad," the captain whispered, looking furtively at the closed door. "If they can hold him safely in prison until the woman is tried and executed they will let him go, or mayhap prefer charges against him and bring him to trial also."

He threw himself down wearily on the pallet of straw in the corner.

"Poor devil!" observed La Fabienne lightly. "But 'tis ever the way of those that consort with evil. Marry! The wretch is fairly caught in the trap these God fearing Puritans have set for him."

His companion grunted a sleepy response.

"If 'tis as thou hath stated, that all the roads are stoutly defended but the footpath through the mountain forest"—La Fabienne eyed the man narrowly—"the witch's accomplice, happen he got wind of his intended arrest, hath small hope of escape."

The captain laughed a drunken laugh of enjoyment; then, raising up in bed on his elbow, he said:

"My lord, 'tis truth thou speakest. The man is fairly caught. But if the wretch had knowledge of the hardships my men and I have endured today he would prefer the hanging that the people have in store for him to attempting escape through the forest. By blood and nails, it was an awful ordeal, an' but for the fact that it was as difficult to retrace our steps as to proceed, my fellows would have refused to advance. A curse on this scraggy top notch of nowhere!" he cried. "Tomorrow, our work done, we march down yon mountain road to London, or I'm but half a man and know not mine own will!"

As his companion did not reply or seem inclined to hold further converse, the captain stretched himself out on the pallet at full length and, throwing an arm up over his head, was soon sleeping soundly.

La Fabienne waited, making sure that the prostrate man was unconscious of all else but his dreams, then threw himself hopelessly into a chair and let the pent up feelings in his heart break through the quiet mask he had worn on his face, and an expression baffled and desperate took its place, while under his breath he cursed himself roundly for his stupid lack of foresight and his contempt for Josiah Taunston's plotting. Springing to his feet, he paced lightly up and down the room like one bereft. Once he paused at the aperture and looked long in the direction of the Mayland farm, the tops of the tall trees in the forest being all that was visible, then strode fiercely across the room again as if unable to contain his emotions. Unlocking a chest that stood in the corner, he removed from it to his person a bag of gold and a brace of pistols, put on his hat and cape and noiselessly buckled on his sword.

"If I allowed her to attempt the forest she would die," he said under his breath, "and if I told her of my intention she would not let me go alone. The candle, now burned down to the edge of the socket, threw weird, smoky rays on La Fabienne's white face as he seated himself, in great perplexity and sore distress, upon the wooden bench.

"Margaret, oh, my love! God help me! There is no other way," he said after a few moments' consideration, and as his bent head fell forward on his hands the candle near him sputtered and went out as if in very sympathy for his sorrow and despair. Rising, he groped his way to the door, down the stairway and out of the house so silently that no one, not even the innkeeper, sleeping in his chair by the chimney place, heard him or knew that he had gone.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE next morning at the earliest hour of dawn, before even the birds had wakened, when the only light on the earth was that received from the rising sun's reflection on the sky, Margaret Mayland, dressed in her riding habit of crimson cloth, moved about the house, busily making her preparations for departure.

"'Tis strange, Elsbeth," she said as she finished fastening a large, square locker, "that Gaston is not here. Hath thou the saddlebags packed? Methinks by now the horses should be fed and in readiness for our journey."

Elsbeth drew her breath sharply.

"'Twill be a glad hour when thou an' I are far away from this domain," she said. "Since we came here, sweet, I ha' been defiant, ever scornful o' the sneers of the people and their sinister glances, but this morning I woke from my fitful sleeping with terror in my heart and a dreadful fear that these villagers, led by thy cousin, would seek to wreak their hatred and intolerant vengeance on thee."

Margaret patted the older woman's shoulder reassuringly.

"Thou'rt overworked, Elsbeth, and hath the megrims as a consequence," she said. "Why talk of fear when we have a strong protector so close at hand? Hast thou yet to learn, foolish old woman, that Sir Godfrey is a man to put dependence on? Last night when he left me he said, 'Trust me, Margaret,' and he needed not mine assurance to know that I did so with all my heart."

Elsbeth walked to the window, looking out anxiously toward the village.

"The hour of dawn is full upon us," she said solemnly, "an' neither thy lover nor his servant is approaching. Happen he meant the morrow, sweet?"

Margaret frowned impatiently.

"Godfrey said this morning at daybreak, and he did not mean any other time," she said crossly. "Mark me, a La Fabienne would ne'er break his word to any one, much less to the woman he loves. See, Elsbeth," she cried a moment later, "the sun is only just above the mountain tops. 'Tis but now the break of day! They'll come anon!"

The women moved about, completing their arrangements with nervous haste, from time to time pausing in their labors to listen for sounds of approaching horses' feet. Suddenly Elsbeth clutched her companion's arm.

"Hist!" she whispered. "What strange sounds fall on mine ears! Dost not hear voices loud calling an' the tramp of many feet?"

Both hastened to an aperture in the hallway that commanded a better view of the road and gates. For a moment they looked on with beating hearts; then Margaret, uttering a groan, cowered against the wall, covering up her face with her hands.

"Oh, God's pity! If Godfrey hath met my cousin Josiah and in his just anger hath killed him!" she moaned.

The other stood looking out of the window hopelessly.

"Elsbeth, say that thou doth see my Godfrey riding this way unmolested!" Margaret cried tearfully.

"I see thy cousin Josiah, an' methinks 'tis the old elder who is the judge or superior in the council on horseback advancing toward this house," Elsbeth announced dully, "an' a party of soldiery surrounded by a throng of excited people do follow them. They are turning in this gateway, Margaret!" the woman fairly shrieked as she turned and threw her arms about her young mistress. "Hide, sweet; mayhap 'tis thee they want. Bolt the doors an' bar the windows! Refuse them admittance!"

Margaret's face was white and startled.

"Elsbeth, calm thyself. Cease thy maunderings," she answered sternly. "I hide! Margaret Mayland hide her face as though she had done wrong! Shame on thee, Elsbeth! Rather bid me throw open wide the door."

"Margaret, sweet babe Margaret," the old woman cried, almost beside herself with fear and apprehension, "then take off the cross thou wearest that doth anger them."

At these words Margaret raised her head haughtily and drew away from the woman, but Elsbeth clung to her wildly.

"Remember that I have loved thee so that thou hast ne'er missed thy mother!" she cried. "Thou hast told me so, sweet, many times when 'twas thy mood to be tender. Margaret, for the care I have given thee I demand a return. Take off the cross that doth anger them!"

The noises outside came nearer, growing louder. Margaret stooped and kissed the sobbing woman on the forehead.

"And have I not loved thee, too, Elsbeth?" she asked as she pushed her gently from her.

Heavy tramping on the steps was heard, then a loud rapping on the door. Margaret's eyes gleamed strangely.

"Go, Elsbeth, throw open wide the door," she said. "Bid our visitors enter."

"Nay, nay, Margaret, I cannot go!" Elsbeth crouched down in the corner on a chair, trembling as with a fit of ague.

"Open, in the king's name!" It was a man's voice shouting. Then he knocked again louder, this time with his sword hilt. Scarce had he ceased when the door was swung back on its hinges, and a young woman, more beautiful than he had ever seen before, with long skirts of red cloth trailing about her and the rose tinted rays of the early morning sun falling on her yellow hair and showing the dazzling whiteness of her skin, stood before him on the threshold and gazed at him, then over his shoulder at the soldiers and throng of curious, excited people with quiet severity.

"Who knocks so rudely at my door and doth bid me open?" she said.

The captain of the guard, who had his papers in his hand, looked about him uncertainly; then a gleam of ardent admiration came into his eyes, and he advanced toward Margaret, pulling his hat off to the ground, with profuse bows. The soldiers at attention awaited orders, and the crowd, whose crying and hooting had sunk to low murmurs of curious interest as the startling sound of the officer's loud rapping fell on their ears, now at the sight of the mistress of Mayland farm began to gesticulate wildly, pointing in her direction and calling loudly: "'Tis she, the witch! The devil's beldame! Take her, good officer, an' thou'lt be doing God's work!"

As she saw the menacing actions and heard the angry accusations of the crowd the pallor on Margaret's face deepened, and she trembled slightly from shock and surprise.

Then, collecting herself with a mighty effort, she spoke again to the officer:

"What duty brings thee to my door, good captain?"

The captain, squaring his shoulders, strutted before her conceitedly, then said in pleasant tones, with an insinuating smile of admiration, "I am commanded, fair lady, by order of the king, to take into custody the person"—here he paused to look over the scroll of parchment he held in his hand—"of a woman, one Margaret Mayland, accused of the crime of witchcraft."

At that moment old Elsbeth appeared in the doorway behind Margaret, her befrilled cap awry and her eyes red with weeping. The captain, observing her, made another low bow to Margaret.

"With your permission I will enter and take her now," he said. "Men, forward!"

The soldiers, with swords clanking, came up the steps. Margaret did not move, for, having caught sight of her cousin, Josiah Taunston, grim, exultant, solemn, astride his high horse in the middle of the gathering, she was gazing at him with an expression of reproachful sternness.

"Gracious mistress"—the captain laid his hand upon her arm—"it will be necessary for me to take this woman. In the king's name I ask thee to allow me to enter."

She drew away from his touch with a quick gesture of offended dignity.

"Why shouldst thou enter, man, when she whom thou hast come to take stands at thy side?" she said.

"Thou, mistress!"

The captain fell back a step or two in his surprise.

"'Tis no wonder that thou doth stare at me incredulous, with open mouth," she said bitterly. "Yea, I am Margaret Mayland, and a woman most unjustly accused."

"Prithee, captain," cried Elder Williams, the chief councilor, who had been whispering aside with Taunston, "do thy duty with more speed. Happen thou stay longer thou'lt fall under the spell of the woman, and, instead of performing the king's work, thou'lt be doing pranks on the green! More haste, officer."

Thus sternly admonished, the captain replaced his helmet and, motioning to his men to come closer, said: "Margaret Mayland, in the king's name I do arrest thee for the black crimes of witchcraft and connivance with the devil. I am under orders to see thee safely in a cell in the town prison, there to await trial for these charges, and it is my duty to command thee to come with me now."

As the captain spoke Margaret listened immovable, with pale face and flashing eyes, and when he had finished, as if she could no longer restrain her indignation at the outrageous injustice, brushed him aside with a sweeping gesture of her hand and, walking through the soldiers to the top of the steps, stood looking defiantly at the concourse of people before her. The sun, now higher and brighter in the heavens, fell upon her warmly, and the gold cross on her bosom gleamed brightly in its rays.

"Ignorant churls! Ingrates! Poltroons!" she cried, with scornful anger. "Dost know 'tis Margaret Mayland that ye do attack? Cowards, to bring a band of soldiery to take one weak woman captive! But know now and think well before ye act that the woman whom ye do accuse is not defenseless, but hath a strong protector close at hand in the person of Sir Godfrey La Fabienne!"

Here she was interrupted by much derisive hooting and the loud shouts and laughter of the crowd. Disregardance, she continued:

NASHVILLE, TENN., September 15—Nashville is built in the hills of Tennessee on the Cumberland river. It is the state capitol and has a population, last census, of about eighty thousand, running in proportion of one-third colored to two-thirds white. A law passed recently by the legislature of Tennessee compels transportation companies to provide separate places or separate cars for the colored people and on riding in the street car I noticed that the rear end of the car was marked "For the colored race," and the front half "For the white race." In a car going out to the fair grounds these two signs appeared and on the side of the car was printed "For the horse race."

While apparently the city officers are diligent in keeping the streets and town clean, yet it does not have a clean appearance. Everything looks dingy and smoky. Evidently the burning of coal fuel has something to do with this. The river is very muddy and one can notice rafts of logs, numerous small boats, and the typical river steamer. All through this country there are very few houses built of wood and I saw no redwood whatever, and I found no one who had seen redwood except an occassional person who had been out to California. A gentleman from Virginia, the head of the improved Order of Redmen, begged of me, as a favor, to send him some specimens of the wood as a curio. The buildings have an old fashioned look and the sidewalks are irregular in their construction and are not uniform in width. I noticed one sidewalk made of artificial stone but four feet from the curb to the property line, with large telephone and telegraph poles inside the curb. I have found out where the small mills throughout the country get their logs; they are a farm asset, and the farmers take a log to market, poplar, oak, cedar, walnut and chestnut, just the same as they carry corn or livestock.

The buildings as a rule do not exceed three or four stories in height, although I see one under process of construction of thirteen stories. The hotels have their dining rooms on the second floor, although this floor is designated here at the "first floor" and the kitchen is in the highest story. The barber shops run by color, white for white and black for black. I visited the market place to get an idea of the produce. There is a very extensive market near the city hall, which appears to be crowded to congestion, and does not look bright, new and clean, like similar places in California. You go through this market to enter the health office. Corn, melons, potatoes and tomatoes seem to constitute the bulk of the vegetables produced. Outside the market stalls, the farmers drive in with their little wagons, and generally with one mule and ranges himself in line around the public square, and he sells wholesale or retail. I walked up to one young darkey who had a small wagon and a mule; the wagon was filled with corn (and the mule didn't seem to be filled with anything) tomatoes and some ochre. Underneath the wagon were two large baskets filled with what he called "yams" or sweet potatoes. I asked him how much he charged a pound, and he did not seem to understand, but offered me either of the large baskets for ninety cents. There was enough in either of the baskets to start a small grocery with. When I asked him how many acres he had in his field, he replied: "I don't know, Sah, bnt it is a 'right smart' of land."

The dining room help is all colored and the manual labor and nearly all other kinds seem to be done by the same kind. We have been entertained royally here, but that which I enjoyed most was an excursion on Wednesday of this week to the Hermitage, the farm, homestead and burial place of Andrew Jackson. This was about thirty miles south of this city, and to me was worth the whole time and expense of the trip. The house is massive, spacious and elegant, having a frontage of 105 feet, of about the same depth and a portico in front running the whole length. The facade of the building is supported by six immense Corinthian columns. The house stands on a low eminence in a country of low rolling hills in the rear of a beautiful natural park. The ranch or farm, includes sixteen hundred acres. Nearby is the home of the confederate veterans, which has all but the twenty-five acres containing the buildings, leased. The park containing the buildings is owned by an association of women who preserve it, care for it and keep it intact. We were shown through the spacious halls and rooms in both stories. The halls are as large as are usually found in public buildings. All of the rooms are preserved, we are told, in the same condition as when last occupied by the noted president. The beds in the bed chambers are made up no different from what our present housewives have, with sheet and pillow sham, but the bedsteads are all of the four post canopy kind

The dishes are in the cupboard and the stoves in the kitchen and the glasses on the sideboard, their accustomed place when they were doing service for the old general and his guests. It was here that General LaFayette spent his time on his visit to the United States; and here Aaron Burr enjoyed the general's hospitality while he was plotting to overthrow the government. The parlor is a very spacious double parlor with large fire places, mirrored mantels, brussels carpet and lace curtains with very few pictures or ornaments. The library is large, with polished oak floor, an abundance of books, limited furniture and no ornaments. The diningroom is a very large room with polished oak floor and huge fire places, much after our modern style. In the rear of the building is a large brick smokehouse, and a well, with its "old oaken bucket." The stable and barn are very much like those in our own country places, and show the signs of age and decay.

To the rear of this massive mansion, perhaps three hundred yards in the field, are two cabin cottages with chimneys at the end, one cabin a little larger than the other. The first was Andrew Jackson's first residents, the other was the house he lived in while the mansion was being built, and the house from which he crawled out of the window when his wife locked him in to prevent his engaging in a duel with Dickinson. After his wife was asleep and in the morning hours, he crawled through the window, went into the next county north, killed his man in a duel, and was seriously shot himself, and returned to the house without the knowledge of his wife. He had been warned by his friends that to meet Dickinson in a duel meant sure death and was told that his antagonist could suspend a hickory-nut on a thread and cut the thread with a pistol ball at any distance within the range of the pistol. He replied that "cutting hickory nuts with a bullet was "very different from shooting a man." And so it proved. The wound that the old general received in this duel resulted, twenty-five years later in his death.

I walked a short distance south of the house to the tomb that marks the final resting place of "Old Hickory," It is a copper covered dome supported by six pillars with a small marble shaft under the center of the dome. I uncovered my head in the presence of this tomb of the mighty dead under the magnolias and hickories planted by his own hand, and thought of the greatness of the man buried beneath, and the conspicuous figure that he was in American history. I gathered some hickory nuts from the trees, which I shall carry back with me as a memento. The tomb is surrounded by an iron fence which is kept locked—in fact all the rooms of the building are enclosed with locked iron fences to keep the curious public from despoiling the furniture and other articles in the house.

But a few feet from the tomb is a small grave in a flowery plot marked with a white marble headstone with the inscription "here lies Uncle Albert, the faithful servant of General Andrew Jackson, who died at the age of ninety-eight years." No less important, perhaps, in the anatomy of the Jackson household than the general himself.

We were given a barbecue in the rear of the building, and an elderly gentleman who was an intimate friend and associate of Andrew Jackson, entertained us with very interesting historical stories and anecdotes of the general's life. Tennessee would be incomplete without Jackson as its hero and the Hermitage as its mecca.

The state capitol, the building in which the great council of Redmen met, is of Greek construction, on the summit of the highest hill in the city. On a beautiful lawn in the east exposure is the equestrian statue of General Andrew Jackson.

I have lost Maj. Cunningham! He gave his itinery on Monday and was to return in time to go back to Chicago with me, but I shall have to return to that point alone and arrange to meet him there. I caught him by phone this morning at a place called Dickson Springs near Carthage and he told me over the wire that he was having such a royal good time that he wished not to be disturbed and that I might go on to Chicago where he would meet me on the beginning of our return trip to California.

The great council adjourned last night, and I cannot leave until eight o'clock tonight, when I will bid farewell to Nashville and the hills of Tennessee. I wanted to see some of the historic battlefields like Murfreesboro, Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain, but my railroad ticket will not permit it. Moreover, all of this country was a battlefield and Nashville was under siege for a while. The Maxwell house which was then hardly completed was made a barracks for the federal troops. Tennessee furnished a large quota of troops and several commanding officers to the confederate army.

I cannot leave Nashville without seeking my old friend from California, the Rev. C. P. Fitzgerald of the M. E. church, south. It was in his office, when he was state superintendent of schools, of California that I received the letter in response to which I went to Mendocino City. I found him at No. 17 Garland Ave. immediately south of the Vanderbilt university, a methodist institution, endowed by one of that wealthy family. The main college building was destroyed by fire some four or five months ago and is now being rebuilt. I found the aged doctor resting up stairs and though he is very old and feeble he regaled me with story and anecdote as he used to years ago. He is one of the trustees of the Vanderbilt university and is classed as a superannuated bishop with two-thirds of his former salary. It is needless to say he was glad to see me. He sends a warm message by me to a number of his good friends in Sonoma and Mendocino counties and mentioned many names to whom I must deliver the message personally. I reminded him of a story he used to tell when he was a Democratic candidate for a state office in California. It was thought, or at least said by his opponents, that because of his being a Methodist clergyman he would lose the bulk of the Irish vote, but he would say in his speeches that Fitzgerald was an Irish name, and that his full name when he was christened was O'Patrick Fitzgerald, and that this gave him more claim to the Irish vote than his opponent could possibly establish. He was elected.

At Chicago I will wait for my chaperone, Major Cunningham. It has not rained for about twenty-four hours and there is some hope of getting on the train before the showers resume. I shall be inclined henceforth to call this land not the "sunny south" but the "rainy south."

Good Health to the Children

Children especially are fond of dainties, and the housekeeper must look carefully to their food.

As good cake can be made only with good eggs, so also a cake that is healthful as well as dainty must be raised with a pure and perfect baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable in the preparation of the highest quality of food. It imparts that peculiar lightness, sweetness and flavor noticed in the finest cake, biscuit, doughnuts, crusts, etc., and what is more important, renders the food wholesome and agreeable to young and old.

CAHTO, Sept, 10.—The Cahto juvenile base ball club gave a grand ball here last Friday evening, Sept. 15. There was a fine crowd and all enjoyed themselves very much. The club ran a lemonade stand in the hall which was very handy for the dancers who wanted a glass of ice cold lemonade. At 12 o'clock, while everyone was preparing for supper, the club called all of their members together and gave some of their yells which echoed and re-echoed through the still night air. After supper the boys gave three cheers for the Willits base ball team, whom they beat a few Sundays ago at a score of 24 to 12.

When all was still again the music started and the dancing was resumed. At 3 o'clock three cheers were given for the success of the Cahto juvenile base ball club and everyone started home wishing them further success in their undertakings. The hall was very beautifully decorated with ferns and red ribbons, red being the club color.

The music was furnished by Miss Mabel West, Cecil A. West and Raymond C. Baker. If the boys do as well in their further attempts as they did in this they will soon be popular.

LAYTONVILLE, Sept. 18.—A dance was given at Cahto last Friday evening under the auspices of the Cahto base ball club and under Marquis of Queensbury rules. It was decidedly a very enjoyable affair. It was a success.

U. H. S. NOTES

Things have been busy at the Ukiah high school since hop picking. Nearly every boy in school may be seen out on the track with his track suit on. Little and big are all training hard to make the track team which is to compete in the A. A. L. this year and the outlook is hopeful.

Last Friday afternoon the senior class entertained the school by giving an afternoon entertainment. Every member of the class took part and each was well prepared for the occasion. The entertainment was opened by a class song which was followed by the class yell, after this the president, Madge Brown, delivered an address which was well prepared and as well delivered. The speech was based on good advice. Following was a comic recitation by Selby Marks; a poem by Harriet Taggart on French. She discussed the subject thoroughly and in a pleasing way to those who do not take the subject. Bell Clarke then recited a piece that showed her knowledge of the country people. Bennett Pemberton sang a bass solo which showed that Bennett has a fine voice; also it showed it had been benefitted by the training of Mrs. Bernhard, the music teacher of the U. H. S.

Adolph Marks proved by former opinions that a mosquito was closely related to man. Marc Carpenter read a well prepared paper which gave each member of the class a boost. H. L. Fallas also sang a beautiful bass solo. Clarence Tindall shared his knowledge of the Japan Russian war among the students. Jess Odle as usual took down the house when she recited on the disadvantages of school life and the enchore she delivered will be remembered long among the U. H. S. students. Fred Woodward distinguished himself by giving a speech on athletics. Keith Eversole read a poem which took well. Dexter Cushman expressed very plainly the power of Christian science. The last number an the program was a song by the quartet. In all the entertainment was a grand success.

Saturday, September 23, the school had an interclass field day which was very exciting. Also it surprised some of the spectators to see what a fine showing the school made in athletics. The prospects of winning the A. A. L. are favorable. Admission was charged and the boys increased the amount of the treasury by over $17. The following events won:

Fifty yard dash, McGimsey, '08, 1st; T Woodward, '06, 2nd; H Fallas, '06, 3rd; L Jones, 09 4th time, 6 sec. 100 yard dash—McGimsey, 08. 1st; G Wallach, 07, 2nd; Woodward, .06, 3rd; H Fallas, 4th: time, 10:4. 220 yd dash—G Wallach, 1st, T Woodward, 2nd; B Pemberten, 06, 3rd; L Jones, 4th; time, 23:4. 440 yard run—Pemberton, 1st; R Fallas, 07, 2nd; A Marks, 06, 3rd; H Prather, 08, 4th; time, 62 sec. 880 run—Walach, 07, 1st, Tindall, 06, 2nd; Murphy, 08, Dutton, 08, 4th; time, 2:30. One mile run, Tindall, 1st; Lafraty, 09, 2nd; Cox, 07; 3rd; Lucas, 4th; time 5:22. 120 hurdle—Rudick, 08, 1st, Prather, 2nd: Cleland 3rd; Marks 4th; time, 18 1. 220 yd hurdle—Rudick, 1st; R Fallas, 2nd; Marks, 3rd; high jump: McGimsey, 1st. Case, 09, 2nd; Duncan; 3rd; Marks, 4th; height 5:2½. Pole vault, Cleland: 1st: Wray, 08 & Tindall, tie for 2nd: height, 9 ft. Broad jump—Rudick, 1st; McGimsey 2nd; H Fallas, 3rd and R. Fallas; distance, 19.8. Shot put—Rudick, 1st, Wray, 2nd; Hildreth, 3rd; Pemberton, 4th; distance, 38:9. Hammer throw—Cleland, 1st; Hildreth 2nd; Prather, 3rd; R Beal, 4th. Relay—Juniors, 1st, sophomores, 2nd, Freshmen, 3rd, seniors, 4th. The sophomores won 1st by 20 points, the juniors 2nd, the seniors 3rd and the freshmen 4th. Earnest Rudick captured the greater number of points. He won four first places or 20 points. He is doubtless the neatest and most graceful hurdler in any high school of the Pacific coast.

Walach proved to be a great runner, both for his speed and endurance. McGimsey deserves much credit for the way in which he executed his part of the field day and he would have been able to have broken some records but he was not hard pressed and beside she was entered in other events than his own. Some of the younger lads did well. Prather the small is a crack and in another year he will be another U. H. S wonder. Wray showed remarkable speed for no training and the balance of the boys made fine showings. The track was slow and the races were not so hard pressed therefore the time was very slow but the boys as a whole can make much better time.' MICKEY.

TRY A WANT AD FOR ALL WANTS

The greatest advertising medium of the age is the want ad column of the newspaper. This is recognized by the public as is evidenced from the pages of want ads in the city papers. The ads are cheap, they are classified so that they may be easily found, and they bring results. The PRESS has on more than one occasion called attention to this method of advertising and pointed out results. Only last week a house and lot advertised in these columns was sold. Not only did one purchaser appear but there were about twenty applications from others all of whom were respective purchasers.

In order to stimulate this method of advertising the PRESS has decided to give a handsome souvenir with each want ad that is published. Next week every person bringing in a twenty-five cent want ad will receive a handsome glass berry dish. The dish alone is worth the price of the ad, so if you have anything to sell, want to buy anything, have rooms to rent, want to swap horses, or want a wife, bring in a want ad. They will bring results. Ads for the paper will be received up to Thursday noon.

CALIFORNIA'S PROSPERITY

BONA FIDE SETTLERS COMING TO CALIFORNIA BY THE THOUSANDS.

For First Eight Days of Colonist Rate This Year 4,493 People Came Into the State.

San Francisco, Sept. 27.—On the 15th of this month the colonist rate on the railroads went into effect, and the first eight days shows that there was an average of 561 people entering the State, or a total of 4,493.

This is the most encouraging news that has been given out for many a day, for it shows the enthusiasm that has been worked up all over the east with reference to California.

In bygone days the bulk of the immigration to the state was principally in the south, and the class of people that came here purchased land and were of the wealthy order. They bought fine tracts of land and put them into oranges and then left the place to care-takers. But the class of immigrants that are now coming to the Coast are genuine settlers. They are men of small means and come here with the view of settling for all time and not making the country a winter resort. They are looking for irrigated land and for places from twenty to forty acres in extent.

Instead of travel going to the south it is the north that is receiving their attention and these men are examining the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys.

There came into the state through the Ogden gateway during the past eight days 3,372 future colonists, and these men all went in search of land in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys. Portland passed on to this state 40, El Paso 942, and Los Angeles 43.

The men who have come here say the reason of their arriving early is to get choice land and be among the first in the rush. They expect to send for their families later on and will be valuable additions to the state.

SPOKANE GETS A SCORCHING.

Three Brick Buildings Are Destroyed in an Early Morning Fire.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 27.—A disastrous fire broke out in the heart of the wholesale and shipping section of the city at 2.35 o'clock yesterday morning, which completely gutted three brick buildings. The total fire loss will approximate $200,000.

The heaviest losers are the Boothe-McClintock Company, wholesale grocers, two story building and contents, $100,000. The Cudahy Packing Company, stock $40,000; C. H. Weeks, three-story building occupied by Pacific Transfer Company, $25,000; Dr. C. P. Thomas, owner of the Cudahy building, $10,000; Robbins, Pratt & Robbins, furniture, $6,000.

The cause of the fire is at present unknown. It broke out in the Cudahy building, which was filled with soap and lard, and spread with great rapidity to the Weeks building on the East. Later the Boothe-McClintock building, on the west corner of the block, caught fire. The four-story brick building on the east corner, occupied by the Spokane Drug Company, was saved by a fire wall.

SECRETARY SHAW TO RESIGN.

He Will Launch in Iowa His Presidential Boom.

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 27.—Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw will leave the cabinet February 1, 1906. He makes the definite announcement in a letter to the president of the County Republican Club.

In his letter, answering a request for a date for an address, Secretary Shaw stated that he would be busy preparing for the coming session of Congress, and would be unable to return to Iowa until February 1, upon which date he expected to retire from the cabinet. Shaw will then, it is said, begin his presidential campaign among his Iowa friends.

Mother Sees Her Child Run Over.

Stockton, Sept. 27.—Oliver Pound, a 3-year-old boy, was run over by an empty hay wagon shortly before noon yesterday causing injury from which he died almost instantly. With another child, he ran out as the hay wagon was crossing the street and asked for a ride. The driver, L. R. Hall, an Atlanta farmer, called to the children to keep off, and continued on his way. Presently he heard a scream, and upon looking about saw that the child had been run over, the wheels passing over his chest. No blame is attached to the driver. The mother witnessed the tragedy.

VISALIA HAS EXPENSIVE FIRE

QUARTER OF A MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH OF BUSINESS PROPERTY DESTROYED.

Nearly a Block of the Finest Business Buildings of Visalia Wiped Out Yesterday.

Fresno, Cal., Sept. 27.—At an early hour yesterday morning a fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, wiped out nearly a block of the finest business buildings of Visalia. The blaze started in the rear of Huffaker's livery stable, where sixteen horses were burned to death and several thousand dollars' worth of harness and buggies destroyed.

Doliner's jewelry store, adjoining the stable, was quickly wiped out. The Woodmen's Hall, a fine brick building, was next consumed. The upper floor was occupied by the Woodmen's Lodge Hall and the lower floor by the Daily Times and a furniture store. Across an alley the flames leaped to the fine new building of the First National Bank, which has been completed and occupied less than a month. In the upper story the rooms of the Kaweah Club were swept clean, over $10,000 worth of furnishings being destroyed. The quarters occupied by the bank were also consumed.

Adjoining the bank building was the Vucovich building, another handsome brick structure, just completed, and it, too, was destroyed bfeore the progress of the flames could be checked. With but one engine to do battle with, the fire department was entirely unable to cope with the flames. The loss, it is claimed, will reach over a quarter of a million dollars. This is the third big fire in Visalia within a month.

EXPLODE 80 TONS OF DYNAMITE

Steamship Chatham, Sunk in Suez Canal to Be Blown to Atoms.

New York, Sept. 27.—Intense excitement prevails at Port Said, consequent on the decision to blow up the steamship Chatham, which was sunk in the Suez Canal some weeks ago while on fire, says a Herald dispatch from Alexandria. There are eighty tons of dynamite in the Chatham's cargo.

That the town will be damaged to any extent is considered unlikely, the vessel being nearly twelve miles distant.

Batteries for the explosion are already fixed at Kantara, which is fourteen miles distant from the ship.

Among the perparations made the railway authorities have one thousand bags of sand ready for repairs and a large staff of workmen have been engaged, as the fresh water canal has been diverged 222 yards. Canal traffic ceases this evening.

The dynamite on board the Chatham will be the greatest amount ever blown up at one explosion.

Thirty tons of dynamite were exploded in 1893 on board a ship anchored at Santander, killing 600 people and injuring over 2,000.

Tomorrow's explosion will be far bigger, but the canal runs through the open desert at the point in question and all necessary precautions have been taken.

Divers will place cases of blasting gelatin in the hold of the Chatham. This will be connected with an electric battery ashore and the eighty tons of dynamite in the wreck will be exploded.

An expert from the Nobel Company, who has conducted the operations, says it is impossible to predict the amount of mischief that will ensue from the great upheaval, or to what extent traffic will be impeded.

WONDERFUL AIR SHIP

BEACHEY'S HUGE MACHINE IS UNDER PERFECT CONTROL DURING FLIGHT

Portland, Ore., Sept. 27.—Perhaps the most remarkable flight ever accomplished in an airship was made yesterday by Lincoln Beachey in the airship City of Portland, from the Lewis and Clark Exposition grounds, over the city, and back to the exposition grounds. Not only was the flight a success from a spectacular standpoint, but in a measure it demonstrated the possibilities of airships in commercial affairs. Beachey navigated the huge vessel with wonderful dexterity and percision, at all times having the airship under control. During the flight Beachey made one stop, on top of the Chamber of Commerce building, where he delivered a letter written by President Goode of the exposition to the Chamber of Commerce.

After delivering President Goode's letter to the Chamber of Commerce Beachey once more ascended and headed his airship toward the office of the Oregon Journal, where he dropped another letter addressed to that paper by President Goode. From the Journal the airship swiftly made its way to the Oregonian building, where another letter addressed to the Evening Telegram, having bearing on Portland day, was dropped on to the roof of the building. From the Oregonian building Beachey headed westward toward St Vincent's Hospital, maneuvering high in the air over that building for some minutes. Beachey then headed the airship for the exposition grounds, where he landed safely, after perhaps the most remarkable flight in the history of air navigation

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Freedom of London City to Gen. Booth.

London, Sept. 27.—The corporation of the city of London at a meeting yesterday unanimously resolved to confer the freedom of the city on General Booth, of the Salvation Army, in "recognition of his great work for the moral and social elevation of the people." This is regarded as an unique recognition by the city which is accustomed to betow the freedom only on members of the royal families, military and naval heroes or statesmen of marked prominence.
